Recreational fishing and boating engagement

Why and how we're talking with fishers

Why?

- To understand how local fishers and boaters use the area
- Share project information and updates
- Hear and respond to questions and feedback
- To identify and act on any issues and opportunities
- Learn about the best ways to keep people informed and involved

How?

- Gippsland office
- Boat ramp surveys
- Online surveys
- Presentations to local groups
- Events
- Industry workshop
- Phone / email enquires
- Social media

VFA Ultimate Fishing Expo, February 2023

We use what we hear to inform the project's development, assessment and future planning for construction and operations

Recreational fishing survey – key findings

What are fishers concerned about?

- Access to the site – misperception about being 'locked out'
- Impacts on fish from noise, vibration, EMF
- May not be able to anchor in wind farm
- Visual amenity/proximity to Corner Inlet
- Impacts on fish (and bird) migration
- Hydrological impacts (currents/tides)
- Ecological impacts from oil spills, dropped objects
- Property damage
- Increased boat traffic, tourism, people!

What are fishers positive about?

- "Artificial reef" effect, creating habitat, attracting fish,
- Broader positive ecological benefits
- Opportunities for employment
- Improved seabed mapping of area
- Increased boat traffic, tourism, people!

Feedback from industry bodies

We've also spoken with the Victorian Fisheries Authority, VRFish, Future Fish, Australian Recreational Fishing Foundation and the Boating Industry Association (Victoria).

What they told us...

- The islands (Seal group) are the most popular destination for recreational fishers offshore
- Fishing numbers typically increases on weekends and holidays
- Results from our boat ramp surveys are consistent with their understanding
- Interested in transit through wind farm for all types of vessels, proximity to turbines
- Interested in potential enhancements to fishing
- Interested in any impacts to fish and fishing and how these will be managed
- Interested in habitat within wind farm area, including composition of the substrate
- Support for Star of the South's approach to baselines fish surveys

Other recreational users

We've also spoken to other boat and recreational users

- Most don't use the area due to distance from shore and ocean conditions
- Yacht clubs in Gippsland indicated they either don't sail offshore or stick closer to shore
- The area is well outside yacht race routes
- Charter operators interested in potential for fishing trips once wind farm is established
